

What is Endometrial Microbiome Test?

Just like the skin microbiota (aggregation of various bacteria), many bacterial species coexist in the reproductive organs. Good bacteria such as Lactobacillus are known to protect the fetus from viral infections and pathogenic bacterial infections by creating an environment where other bacteria cannot multiply.

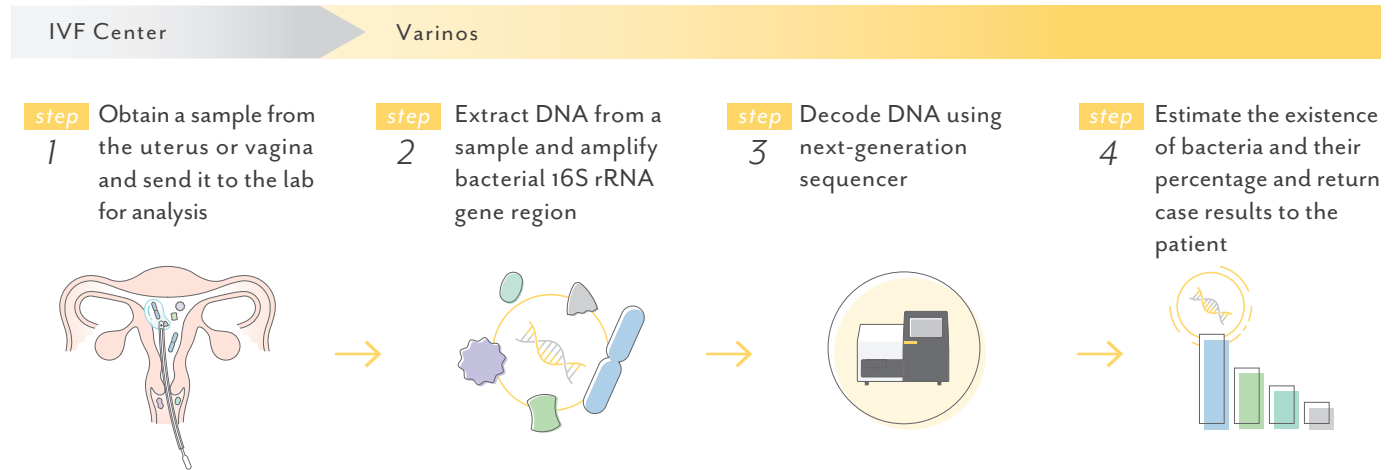

Endometrial Microbiota and Pregnancy Results

According to the investigation at IVI Valencia Clinic, women having more than 90% of endometrial Lactobacillus (LDM) had higher pregnancy and live birth rates compared to women having a lower percentage of endometrial Lactobacillus (NLDM).

Workflow of Endometrial Microbiome Test

The endometrial microbiome test examines the existence of Lactobacillus spp. in the endometrium or vagina, which is thought to be involved in implantation and pregnancy outcomes. The test uses a NGS (next-generation sequencer) to analyze the 16S rRNA genes of all bacteria present in the specimen to identify and estimate the percentage of bacteria present in the specimen. The percentage of other bacterial species including pathogenic bacterial species are also provided.

Sample of Endometrial Microbiome Test Results

BACTERIAL NAME (GENUS)	PERCENTAGE
1 Lactobacillus	24.5%
2 Gardnerella	18.5%
3 Megasphaera	13.4%
4 Prevotella	7.9%
5 Actinomyces	6.2%
6 Enterococcus	6.1%
7 Atopobium	5.1%
8 Mycoplasma	4.2%
9 Dialister	3.9%
10 Sneathia	3.7%
11 Crostridium	3.7%
12 Ureaplasma	2.7%
13 Others	0.1%

Who can benefit from the Endometrial Microbiome Test and what?

Patients

Women wishing to get pregnant

Patients who undergo infertility treatment but are not pregnant

Patients with RIF

Patients with recurring miscarriage and preterm birth

Benefit

- Percentage of Lactobacillus spp.
- Endometrial Microbiota
- Existence of other bacteria

Note that this test cannot be used for diagnostic purposes.

For more info, contact Nidacon

Address: Flöjelbergsgatan 16B,
431 37 Mölndal, Sweden
Tel: +31-703 06 30
Email: contact@nidacon.com
URL: <https://www.nidacon.com>

Endometrial Microbiome Test

Understand whether your endometrial microbiota is balanced for pregnancy and birth.

Address : DiverCity Tokyo Office Tower 21F,
1-1-20 Aomi, Koto-ku, Tokyo, Japan
Tel : +81-3-5422-6501
Email : info@varinos.com
URL : <https://www.varinos.com>

